NEW! THE LIGHTBULB BLOG FOR TRAINERS

Improve your training skills by reading articles on The Lightbulb blog, a new professional development offering published by the Center for Child Care Career Development. The Lightbulb blog is accessible through the CCCCD website and provides a way for trainers to stay connected with CCCCD updates and add new training tools to their toolboxes. Trainers, you'll find ideas for meaningful icebreakers, instructional strategies, training design ideas and more at www.sc-cccd.net/Training/Blog/.

MICRO-COURSES FOR TRAINERS

The training coordinators at the Center for Child Care Career Development, in coordination with Sharon Bowman, have developed a series of free micro-courses for trainers. These seven courses are short, highly visual, interactive slide presentations. They are found on the Center's website: <http://sc-cccd.net/Training/Micro-Courses.html>. They contain content that will help trainers write their outlines and deliver training using the best of adult learning principles. Micro-courses were written specifically for trainers. There is no DSS credit awarded for viewing these micro-courses.

The Center for Child Care Career Development is a part of the South Carolina DSS Division of Early Care and Education.

UPDATE YOUR TRAINING CONTENT

*Seminar by Kelley Buchheister

February 10, 2016 ★ REPEAT!

Teaching Stem Through Block Play

This session will focus on the many Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematical (STEM) concepts that are naturally learned through block play and the mathematical language children demonstrate during free play with various building materials. Participants will analyze classroom videos of children working in block centers during free play, discuss STEM concepts and skills developed through the free play experiences, engage in block play activities through stimulating questions and investigations, and develop instructional strategies to design play spaces that will provide students with the greatest opportunity to learn during free play with blocks.

A Teachable Moment: Innovative Techniques For Review And Reflection

This seminar introduces experiential, brain-based strategies that help participants make connections between the training experience and real life work applications. Educators will fill their toolboxes with processing, reflection and community building strategies that create lasting lessons for learners. This training is perfect for new, as well as seasoned trainers. Jen is the author of A Teachable Moment, Tips & Tools for the Art of Experiential Group Facilitation and Inspired Educator, Inspired Learner.

The Inspired Educator, The Inspired Learner

NOTE: Attendees must have attended A TEACHABLE MOMENT to register for this seminar

Educators recognize the value of reflection and processing, but often find that facilitating them is one of the most challenging aspects of teaching and group work. Continue the exploration of experiential, brain-based strategies to explore reflection and processing more deeply with Jen. Attendees will build on previous knowledge from A Teachable Moment and explore the use of art, objects, journaling and movement in reflective practice. Jen's innovative techniques create multiple pathways to learning and allow trainers to review and reinforce training content in novel and engaging ways.

From Sage to Guide: An Introduction to Training from the BACK of the Room!

You already know that the best way for a person to learn something is to teach it to someone else. But how do you organize training so that learners are teaching each other and learning from one another? How do you put learners "center stage" instead of the trainer? In this high-energy, interactive day, you'll add to what you already know about collaboration in the classroom with new learning strategies that hand over much of the direct instruction to the learners themselves. As a bonus, you'll experience The World Café, a unique process for collaboration and conversation about issues that matter. You'll leave with dozens of new ideas and resources to enhance your teaching and training skills.

Innovative Training Techniques – For New Or Novice Trainers

New at training? This two day seminar is a highly interactive train-the-trainer program designed to teach beginning trainers how to effectively design and deliver course content. Trainers will learn adult learning methods and strategies that will dramatically increase their ability to engage and involve their participants. As a result of this two day seminar, participants will gain confidence in their training skills and ability to plan and write training outlines.

Integrating Experiential Techniques With Content

NOTE: Attendees must have attended A TEACHABLE MOMENT and THE INSPIRED EDUCATOR, THE INSPIRED LEARNER to register for this seminar

Trainers who enjoyed Jennifer Stanchfield's first two seminars are invited to attend this new seminar to gain deeper knowledge about experiential learning for adults. "We only think when we are confronted with problems," said John Dewey so participants will dive deeper into the process of encouraging problem solving among adult learners. Trainers will explore how to link experiential activities to a variety of training topics as well as expand on the use of metaphor as an engaging learning tool.
